

From WIT to Work- Bahraini Student Becomes the Teacher

Nahid (far right) ecstatic about graduating in May 2009

When Nahid Al Hajri*, a mother of four, first joined the WIT training program, she never imagined that she would one day join the ranks of women who use technology to educate others. As a student Nahid stood out as one of the most active and dedicated in her class. “I believe that technology develops our personalities and enables us to catch up with the future,” she states.

Nahid intended to find a job when she completed the program but faced many obstacles as professional opportunities for women are scarce. WIT Bahrain’s program manager recognized Nahid’s drive and dedication to furthering women’s education and offered her a position as a trainer for the WIT program. Nahid eagerly accepted and is excelling as a trainer for WIT Bahrain. Her new position brings a sense of accomplishment and allows her to make a difference in the lives of her students.
