

Fidaa Balhas & Hanadi Ghassani

Fidaa Balhas shares a similar story to many women who enroll in WIT as she had no previous experience with computers. “I enrolled because I wanted to accomplish work in less time and communicate with the younger generations of women” explains Fidaa, who is a 22-year old farmer from southern Lebanon.

At first Fidaa wasn't sure she could take the classes because she lives far from the WIT center. With the support of Miriam, a WIT trainer who made her car available, Fidaa was able to enroll.

Miriam has assisted countless women in order to make their training possible. Hanadi Ghassani, an 18-year old student describes Miriam as “intellectual, patient, ambitious and a well respected trainer.” Hanadi joined the program in order to obtain the necessary skills to find a job and utilize the WIT professional development network. Hanadi wants contribute to her community as Miriam has by supporting other women.
